—The Memphis Appeal of Tuesday says:

"Rev. E. C. Slater has gone to his reward as a faithful servant of Christ. He died yesterday. No man did more than he in behalf of the sick. He carried consolation to the afflicted, and bore the blessed assurance of Jesus to the dying. Night and day he traveled from one bedside to another, knowing no rellef so long as there remained one unattended who needed his ministration. A faithful minister of the Methodist church, he went wherever called, knowing no divisions among Christians, as he said himself many times, knowing nothing but Christ, and him crucified.' The years of his ministry in Memphis were full of grace to him and his people, though he passed with them through the epidemic of 1878, and so far through this. Endearing himself to all classes, the presiding elder of the district, yielding to a general desire, left him with us as one who had done, and was still capable of more good. After the ceremony and congratulation by friends and relatives, the happy pair left for the home of the groom, near Trenton,

"We all do fade as a leaf." Died, at his home in Montgomery county on the 6th of September, William Donaldson in the 8kl year of his age. Born in mained in his adopted home until the day

When the great reaper, with silent foot grain, ripe and ready for the harvest. No man, perhaps, ever lived a more blameless endurance. The weary folded hands that had so long known life's labor left the legacy of an honored memory to his children, sweeter than precious continent and more treasured than golden gifts. He was nobly unselfish, ever prefering others to self. A member of the Baptist Church for over fifty years he stood a grand old land-mark, for the way and cause of God. He was a cheerful Christian, if the narrow way was ever steep and stony it did not oppress his spirit, because through faith he saw the bright and shining end.

To the partner of his life who has walked shining end.

To the partner of his life who has walked by his side for seven and fifty years, this grief is great and crushing. A sore, severe trial to come to the silvered head and faltering step. But her aim must be to unite the broken tie beyond the dark, dim river of death, where it can never again be severed, and it will be husband and wife through all the long bright years of eterality. Hesignation to his phildren now, must seam very far away. The old and honored prop has fallen by the way-side. It has been said bare,

The chance is gone forever, and is past the reach of prayer, "
